4. CITIZEN'S INPUT:

James Loomis, Woodbury County Attorney, introduced himself. He is up for re-election and is asking for support. When he first ran for office he made a commitment to the cities in the county to engage and communicate with them. He continues to do that to address the needs of each community. He is happy to address any issues that the Council may have.

Aaron Lincoln said that the last time James was here, he was working on the staff shortage he had, he asked for an update.

James said that they've made a lot of progress. They were down 8 of 18 positions, but they are currently only down by one position. He anticipates that will be filled by September.

Kirk Moriarty asked James what are some of the biggest issues in Woodbury County today?

James said that one of the primary concerns he hears as he visits communities is; they're dealing with various issues with residents and their properties. In addition, they struggle with funds to hire their own attorneys to address the issues they have. He is still placing a priority on violent crime. He set up a designated group of attorneys in his office to handle violent crimes. He also works closely with the U.S. Attorney's office to determine whether someone needs to be charged Federally.
