THE MAGIC OF POSSIBILITIES

Veteran performer keynotes annual Corridor luncheon

A magician never reveals all of his secrets, so expect Devin Henderson to have a few surprises up his sleeve for business leaders in Buena Vista, Clay, Dickinson and Emmet counties.

The veteran performer from Kansas City will be the keynote speaker for the Iowa Lakes Corridor's 15th Annual Business Recognition Luncheon. The 11:30 a.m. program takes place Wednesday, Jan. 28, at the Clay County Regional Events Center in Spencer.

Henderson is starting his 23rd year as a professional speaker. Whether he's in front of PepsiCo executives or the lunch crowd in northwest Iowa, Henderson's goal is to tie humor and magic to a larger message. Attendees aren't left wondering "How do we apply this?"

"I want them to be able to take information directly to their work — that same day — and apply a lot of the principles," the keynote speaker said.

His message centers around the question, "What else is possible?"

"The answer is, something greater is always possible," Henderson said. "For me personally, it is about growing in my faith, growing as a husband, growing as a dad and really making sure that I'm living selflessly in a way that is impacting other people."

That inspirational message has taken him to 41 states and Canada. A booking in Germany is on the horizon, but those connections with an audience weren't always the product of a detailed itinerary.

Magicians on TV captured Henderson's imagination early on.

"Then a magician came to my elementary school in fifth grade, did a school assembly and got me onto the stage," he said. "That's what really got me hooked — getting up in front of everybody and realizing: you don't have to be a famous magician on TV to be considered a professional magician."

Henderson turned that pre-teen moment into hours of combing the shelves of his local library. The self-taught illusionist checked out every book on magic tricks he could find.

The performer realized he could turn his passion into a career while he was at Kansas State University.

"I kind of hit a fork in the road toward the end of college at K-State," Henderson said. "It was either try magic as a living or get my master's degree in marriage and family therapy. After I got my bachelor's, I just decided, 'Let me just try this — just approach some restaurants and see how it works.' I landed a couple of restaurant gigs, and the rest is history. It just took off from there."

Henderson's two-plus decades on the road have led to some surprising moments, which he'll share with the Spencer audience.

Visit the Iowa Lakes Corridor Development Corporation website to RSVP for the event and confirm a seat.

The Corridor Annual Business Recognition Luncheon includes the 2025 annual report and recognition for Corridor business leaders whose vision in 2025 led them to ask:

"What else is possible?"

About 300 attendees will gather in Spencer for the Iowa Lakes Corridor's 15th Annual Business Recognition Luncheon to recognize local achievement and review priorities shaping northwest Iowa's economy. Veteran speaker and magician Devin Henderson of Kansas City will keynote the program. Henderson recently published his first book, "What Else is Possible? A Magician's Secrets to Greater Breakthroughs in Your Life and Work," which is available on Amazon. (Photo submitted)
